

Publishing Policies Eleven

Copyright, License, and Permissions Policies

Copyright on all materials presented on www.elevenjournals.com, including text, pictures, graphics, pdf, audio and video files, etc., is owned by Koninklijke Boom uitgevers, Boom uitgevers Den Haag and their imprint Eleven.

All the content published by Eleven is archived in our database, in print on location in Den Haag, the Netherlands and at the Dutch national library Koninklijke Bibliotheek to guarantee its long-term and secure preservation in any circumstances.

Corresponding authors accept the terms of the Copyright Agreement on behalf of all co-authors during the manuscript submission. Any materials from previous publications can be included in the submitted manuscripts only if necessary copyright permissions had been obtained from the corresponding publishers.

Regards the content available under subscription any further publication, reproduction, distribution or other use of the content of the website for public or commercial purposes is prohibited without permission given by Eleven. Permissions can be obtained through Selma Hoedt (s.hoedt@boom.nl). The amount of information self-archived by authors in open access institutional repositories or public servers should not exceed the amount of information freely available on the Eleven journals website (www.elevenjournals.com) for unregistered users.

All papers published under the terms of Open Access are distributed under Creative Commons Attribution License (CC BY 4.0) and can be self-archived at the author's own discretion.

Plagiarism Policy

All manuscripts submitted to Eleven journals are peer-reviewed by experts in their field. Allegations of plagiarism are subject to further investigation and can result in rejection or withdrawal of the manuscript or article.

Ethics Eleven

Eleven strives to ensure the quality of the published content and calls authors, editors, reviewers and publisher representatives for ethical behavior.

When submitting a new manuscript corresponding authors are expected to consider whether:

- people identified as co-authors fully qualify for authorship (significant contribution to the work, development of the design and concept of the research, data processing and analysis, writing or revising the manuscript, accountability for all aspects of the work)
- all the parties contributed to a manuscript are mentioned in the acknowledgments (attraction of funding, general administrative support; writing assistance, technical editing, language editing, proofreading, etc.)
- all the co-authors give their consent to submit the final version of the manuscript
- the manuscript is original; all the work and wording which was taken from others is appropriately cited
- sufficient detail and references are provided to permit others to reference the text
- manuscripts describing essentially the same research have not been submitted to several journals to avoid multiple or redundant publication
- relationships that potentially could result in a conflict of interest are disclosed

Reviewers follow COPE's Ethical Guidelines for Peer Reviewers and:

- treat manuscripts received for review as confidential documents
- keep confidential the ideas obtained through peer review, not using them for personal advantage
- provide objective peer review, clear and well-founded reports in a timely manner
- excuse themselves from peer review, if feel unqualified to provide a relevant report, have conflicts of interest resulting from competitive, collaborative or other relationships or connections with any of the authors, companies, or institutions connected to the papers.

Editors follow COPE's Code of Conduct and Best Practice Guidelines for Journal Editors:

- a double-blind peer review, a confidential peer review or a confidential request regarding recommendations about the author in question and their work or relevance in the field; the name of the reviewer always remains anonymous
- evaluation of manuscripts exclusively on the basis of academic merit and fair publication decisions disclosure of potential conflicts of interest
- protection from use of unpublished information in editors' own research without written consent of the author
- confidential treatment of unpublished information
- due cooperation, investigation and measures in case of complaints regarding submitted or published papers

Pursuing Misconduct

Eleven strives to ensure ethical publishing practices if misconduct is suspected, including research fabrication, research falsification, copyright infringement, multiple submission, bogus claims of authorship or plagiarism. When concerns are raised about submitted or published papers, the Editorial Boards of Eleven journals and Eleven arrange for appropriate procedures to investigate the case.

If the misconduct is proven at the stage of submission or peer review, the paper in question is subject to rejection.

If the misconduct is proven after acceptance for publication, the paper in question is subject to withdrawal.

If the misconduct is proven after publication, the paper in question is subject to retraction in accordance with the procedures described in COPE's Retraction Guidelines.

In case authors of a submitted or published paper discover a significant error, they are obliged to promptly notify the journal editor or publisher and cooperate to correct or retract the paper.
